“A Matter of Murder” Brings Golden Age of Detective Stories to Stylish Life

Procedurally Generated Puzzle Game to Launch April 18, 2016

CAMBRIDGE, MA, April 04, 2016—Zounds! One of the guests at an English house party has fallen victim to cold-blooded murder. Your lovely weekend in the country is ruined! What choice have you but to ask your fellow guests probing questions, search the house, draw astonishingly insightful conclusions and solve the crime?

A Matter of Murder is a point-and-click puzzle game with rogue-like elements for Windows, Mac and mobile. The details of each murder are procedurally generated, so the game is different every time you play with progressively more challenging logic puzzles. A Matter of Murder can also randomly combine logic puzzles to provide seemingly endless surprises and high replayability. The game will officially launch on desktop platforms April 18, 2016. Mobile launch to follow.

“A Matter of Murder deftly weaves in rogue-like elements via a series of challenging logic puzzles. Add to this some beautifully stylized artwork and you’ll find yourself wondering where the last few hours of your life went.” —The Care and Feeding of Nerds

“It’s like every murder mystery dinner you ever attended, except way deadlier and way more fun. Trust us.” —FemHype

“Nina Huntemann, co-organizer of the Women in Games Boston group, loved A Matter of Murder... a puzzle-solving game with an Edward Gorey-esque art style. ‘It makes you mad for mystery and mayhem,’ she said.” —Beta Boston
